ABOUT ME

I'm Amirhossein Sarvenazzadehkhandar, but most folks know me as Veromento. I first came into this world in Iran back in 1995 and spent some time in Cyprus before making Turkey my current base. Right now, I'm splitting my time between Turkey and the vibrant scenes of the United Arab Emirates.

For about nine years now, I've been fully immersed in the world of creating videos and capturing moments through my lens. It's something that truly fuels my spirit and pushes me to always seek out new ways to tell stories visually.

I've got this curious mix in my background – a Bachelor's degree in Urban Engineering. It might seem like an odd pairing with my visual arts work, but it's actually helped me develop a unique perspective on design and aesthetics that I bring into my creative projects.

From shooting videos to snapping photos, I've had the chance to work with diverse clients across different industries. Every project is a new adventure for me, a chance to dive into someone's story and bring it to life through visuals.

What drives me is that spark of creativity and the challenge of crafting narratives that resonate deeply with people. I'm always on the lookout for fresh angles and innovative ways to capture the essence of moments and brands.

As Veromento, my goal is to keep pushing the boundaries of visual storytelling, always evolving, and always striving to create work that connects and captivates audiences worldwide.
